
What about the AFS Licence and your Advisers?

Posted by haydn - 2008/06/09 19:54

Hi,

I was talking to a friend who told me that you need to have an AFS Licence to be able to advise people on insurance matters. I can't find that information on your site.

Regards,
Haydn

=====

Re:What about the AFS Licence and your Advisers?

Posted by admin - 2008/06/09 20:11

Hi Haydn,

great question. Our advisers are all fully licensed and you will receive their individual licensing details together with your free quote.

Sincerely,
EzInsurance Admins

=====

Re:What about the AFS Licence and your Advisers?

Posted by albertjames - 2008/09/25 17:12

General Insurance Brokers - act on your behalf to find and arrange insurance protection. Insurance brokers will typically deal with multiple insurers and 'shop around' to get you the best cover and price to meet your needs. Brokers are obliged to advise you of any fees charged for services provided to you. Brokers have their own Australian Financial Services (AFS) License.

albertjames
ethical seo

=====